261 Fort DuPont "Flashes" was the World War II post newspaper published bi-monthly by the Special Service Office at Fort DuPont located just south of Delaware City, Delaware.
270 The purposes for publishing a newspaper were to "acquaint members of the command with the activities of other units: "be a medium for artistic expression by members of the command"; and "make a cohesive whole of the various organizations com-rising the post". Reporters were selected from each unit to contribute articles or supply information. Articles from anyone were welcomed. Articles were submitted by each unit and generally highlighted recent personal interest stories or anecdotes from within that unit. Other sections contained in the newspaper included results of post sports activities, a message from the chaplain, announcements of upcoming events and post gossip. Beginning in December, 1942, photographs were included with some of the articles and issues were published only once a month.
NB: In 1945, Fort DuPont was declared surplus federal property and sold to the State of Delaware.
