261 Lewis was a farmer and carpenter near Camden, Delaware. Although he called it a daybook, this is actually a ledger used to record his various financial dealings.
270 The volume shows the date, name of person, type of transaction, amount owed, and how paid. Some agreements with hired hands and property rentals are recorded in the book. At the back of the volume is a record of when his mare horses gave birth and the name or type of sire. Included in the volume were an 1865 Delaware Gazette calendar, a printed floor plan and elevation for a district school house, and a photograph of six young women, ca. 1920s.
