261 "Voices of War" was a project directed by Thomas J. Healy to conduct oral history interviews with World War II veterans. These miscellaneous records were given to Healy by the veterans, their families, or others interested in the project.
27X Records relating to individual servicemen include John H. Banks, John W. Freebery, Harvey Parry, and his son and daughter. One file contains information on Watson Warriner, a DuPont Company chemical engineer who worked on the Manhattan Project. There are several World War II related publications: "Pass in Review, the 132nd Field Artillery Battalion in World War II," "Reflections of Dravo," and "The Women Airforce Service Pilots." Also included are the assault plans for Roi-Namur during the Battle of Kwajalein, ca. January 1944. Photographs are present for the Harvey Parry family and for servicemen from Millsboro which were used in the Millsboro Honor Roll: World War II by Aubrey Murray.
