261 The scrapbooks were compiled by Governor Robert J. Reynolds (1891-1895) and his descendants to document his political career and family accomplishments.
270 This collection of scrapbooks highlights not only the politics of Governor Robert J. Reynolds, but also his personal history as well. Two of the scrapbooks focus on Reynold's political involvement, using a large amount of newspaper clippings to reveal political views and standpoints. Of importance, a few of the newspaper clippings within the collection are ballots of the elections that Reynolds was running in and the total amount of votes he received in the election. Many of these newspaper clippings give detail concerning Governor Robert J. Reynold's background, family, and the beginnings of his political career.

The larger scrapbook in the collection touches more on the personal history of Robert J. Reynolds and his family. Included in the scrapbook are photographs, family portraits, and memorabilia. Documents of significance include a marriage certificate of Robert J. Reynolds to his wife Lovenia and a handful of certificates and diplomas of members of the Reynold's family, especially relating to his son, Byron Reynolds. Sketches and prints of the University of Virginia are included, along with Byron's diploma from the college. The scrapbook also maps out Byron's education at Cornell University as a part of the engineering program. Following these certificates are several class reunion pictures. There are also several land plots of the Governor's property as well as photographs of his house.
