DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Delaware State Museum occupies four buildings on the plot reserved as Meeting House Square on the original plot of Dover laid down in 1717. Building No. 1 is the Old Presbyterian Church erected in 1790, an excellent example of an early Federal brick meetinghouse. It is of three-bay width, nearly square, two stories and attic in height, with a belfry providing an unusual enclosed stairwell. The octagonal cupola sheltering the bell, removed in the nineteenth century to leave the truncated tower, has been restored; otherwise the exterior is in its original condition. The interior has good panelling, the unusual staircase referred to above, and a wide railed gallery. These features have been retained in adopting the structure to museum use. Originally there were box pews, one of which was found in storage and reinstalled as an exhibit. The former church is still surrounded by its well-maintained burial ground.

Building No. 2 was a brick chapel erected in 1880. Its exterior and its high Gothic ceiling remain unaltered. Building No. 3 is not a part of the church complex but the office of a gas plant which occupied half the block in the late nineteenth and earlier twentieth centuries. It is a sturdy one story brick building of late nineteenth century date. Unit No. 4 is a handsome recent structure of Georgian design, the Eldridge Reeves Johnson Memorial Building.

The Museum plant with its parking lot now occupies all the block bounded by Governors Avenue, Bank Lane, North Street and New Street. The neighborhood, long commercial interspersed with deteriorating housing, began a slow recovery upon the demolition of the gas works about 1955. The improvement is accelerating with the erection of a well-designed city police headquarters nearby and a scheduled Federal Building directly opposite.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Old Presbyterian Church is an excellent specimen of the religious architecture of the Federal period. The congregation it housed for 134 years was the first of the denomination in Kent County and an important factor in the ethical and educational development of the town and county from 1714. Among members buried in its churchyard are John M. Clayton (1796-1856), jurist, statesman and United States Secretary of State; and Colonel John Haslet, commanding officer of the Delaware Battalion in the Revolution until his death at the Battle of Trenton in January, 1777. The present Museum Building No. 1 was erected near the close of the long pastorate of Rev. John Miller (d.1791), who was briefly succeeded by his son Rev. Samuel Miller, later a distinguished professor at Princeton. A State constitutional convention held its sessions in this building in 1831, an earlier convention, 1791-92, in which John Dickinson was the most influential figure, may also have met there.

Buildings No. 2 and 3, though not of the architectural importance of the Church, are nevertheless good examples of a later nineteenth century small town church edifice and a small industrial building. The exhibits the three units house interpret many phases of Delaware life and history to several thousand visitors yearly. The Johnson Building is devoted to the history of sound recording as developed by the Victor Talking Machine Company.

Dear Dr. Tompkins:

You have been notified that the Delaware State Museum (the Old Presbyterian Church) was added to the National Register on February 1. However, you should have been notified also at that time that Building No. 4 (the Eldridge R. Johnson Memorial Building) was not included as part of the registered property.

We wish to inform you now that Building No. 4 was not included so that in the event of possible Section 106 cases or future grant applications by Delaware, you will know exactly what is protected and also eligible for matching funds. It is our intention, for the sake of clarity, to call the property the Delaware State Museum Buildings (Old Presbyterian Church Complex).

If you have any questions about the property, please consult this office.

Sincerely yours,

Sally A. Marusin
