THE LEWES COALING STATION

In reference to the Lewes coaling station project The Pilot says: "As the days roll by the rumor of the Lewes coaling station becomes stronger, and now there is not a shadow of doubt that Congress will be asked for an appropriation for this harbor. The parties interested feel confident that it will be allowed. The need of a coaling station here has been argued for a number of years, but for some reason no effective movement has been made with this end in view, notwithstanding the benefits to be derived by people who, as a rule, get what they want. To the East Indian trade it is of great importance. A pilot said the other evening, "Out of every twenty steamers that come here from the East Indies there would scarcely be one that would not find a big advantage in coaling up here. Instead of having to stop at Bermuda, she could make a straight run for the Breakwater, get her coal, and proceed to her destination without the delay that is now necessary." To a steamer coming from the South the saving of time by a straight run to this port instead of having to go up to Norfolk, would also be a big item."

BROKE HIS NECK

On Thursday afternoon last, Mr. John Taylor, a carpenter of Church Hill, Md., fell from a scaffold and broke his neck while at work on a barn, on the farm of Mr. W. Massey, near Sudlersville. No
