The Delaware Sports Museum and Hall of Fame at the Daniel Frawley Stadium on Wilmington's Riverfront celebrates 150 years of the state's sports history. Recent headline-grabbing feats, such as the state's first Little League World Series team, are touted in special exhibitions that heighten the appeal of the museum's well-designed permanent displays. Memorabilia, artifacts, uniforms and photographs cover everything from Judy Johnson, the city's Negro League hero and National Baseball Hall of Famer, to Olympians and high school and college teams.
